MAGNATES FEAR THE COURT EXPUISION OF THE ST. LOUIS BASE. BALL CLUB IS POSTPONED,

League Men Decide Not to Entangle Themselves with the Law-Report Recommending Increased Power for the Board of Discipline - The Schedule - Gossip.

The League baseball magnates spent the entire afternoon yesterday in star-chamber session after lobbying all the morning, and when President N. E. Young was asked what had been accomplished he answered that Nothing, absolutely nothing, had been done." This was in part true, for the reason that while the megnates wanted to do many things they found themselves so tied up in various ways that they couldn't move hand or foot. When the Board of Directors adjourned late on Tuesday night it was confidently expected that the ill-fated 8t Louis Club would be expelled from membership for non-payment of dues and other debts. The magnates who engineered this our, with the idea of installing Robison in the Mound City with his Cleveland team, had received assurance that all of the club delewates would support them and that they could go ahead with the expulsion business the first thing yesterday morning. According to some of the magnates it required a three-fourths vote to accomplish the banishment of Von der Ahe while others pointed to the constitution, which called for a unanimous wote on this important matter. When the League convened at noon, for the first time the magnates reached here on Monday. the following delegates were in their chairs: Boston, A. H. Soden and W. H. Conant; Brooklyn,

Abell and Edward Hanlon; New York, A. H. Seden (by proxy); Philadelphia, A. J. Reach and John I. Bogers; Baltimore, F. A. Abell and Edward Hanlon: Washington, J. Earl Wagner; Chicago, James A. Hart; Cincinnati, John T. Brush; Cleveand, Frank De Hass Robison; Pittsburg, W. W. Kerr, Louisville, Barney Dreyfus and Harry Pulliam; St Louis, B. S. Muckenfuss,

The report of the Board of Directors was immediately taken up, and the St. Louis Club was placed upon the pan. While the magnates were discussing the case, Muckenfuss threw a bombshell into their camp by announcing that he and received some bad news from St. Louis, He said that he had been advised that if the League expelled the St. Louis Club for non-payment of dues and thereby took the franchise, the Missouri courts would not sanction such action, but would probably tie up matters so that nobody, not even Robison, could play hall there this season. Muckenfuss also declared that in his epinion the courts, now having jurisdiction over the club, which has been ordered to be old at receiver's sale on March 14, would protect the creditors and would permit them to enjoin the League if the franchise should be taken away. It was further disclosed by the St Louis man that the courts might object if 8t. Louis man that the courts might object if the League should try to keep the franchise away from any bidder who should attempt to buy the club. This information carried the day with some of the more conservative members of the League, and along wrangle followed. Rogers of Philadelphia made an extended argument to show the necessity of avoiding entanglements with the court and the law. Abell, Rerr. Soden and others followed with similar arguments, but with Brush, Hart, Robison and Wagner there was only one course to pursue, and that was to vote upon the merits of the case and expel the club. The discussion was brought to a close with an informal vote, which resulted in a defeat for the expulsion proposition by 7 to 4, the minority consisting of Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Washington. At the same time if was mitually agreed that this action would not be final, but merely meant a postponement until after March 14, the date of the St. Louis club's sale. Afterward Abell said:

"Most of us did not believe it good policy to go against the courts, for baseball procedure as a rule will not stand legal tests. While every delegate wants to see Robison get his Cleveland team into St. Louis, it seems to be common sense to go about the matter with some degree of care and deliberation. After the St. Louis Club has been sold at auction, the League can proceed in any way it may see fit."

From what many of the magnates say there will be a special meeting of the League called for the last week of this month to settle the matter definitely. The fact that two schedules, each arranged for twelve cities, were looked over "Mosterday and placed on file until after March the League should try to keep the franchise matter definitely. The fact that two schedules, each arranged for twelve cities, were looked over yesterday and placed on file until after March 14, is further evidence that another meeting will be held. It is also ground for the belief that superhuman efforts will be made between now and that time to reduce the circuit to eight or ten cities. The schedules submitted called for three and four trips, respectively, and the latter appealed more to the delegates than the former.

ten cities. The schedules submitted called for three and four trips, respectively, and the latter appealed more to the delegates than the lormer.

"If the League is going on with its present circuit of twelve cities," said a well-known manager. "why wasn't the schedule adopted to-day instead of being beid on file until after it is known whether Robison can get into St. Louis? It looks like a cut-down when the wires have been properly strung."

Brush, Soden, and Hart, after the St. Louis business had been settled, acting as the committee appointed at the December meeting to prepare a report on the application of the Board of Discipline for increased power, got the attention of the delegates, and Brush, as spokesman, read the new resolution, which is sweeping in its scope. It provides that players who kick against decisions, assault one another or the umpires, or insult spectators, by the use of vulgarity can be tried and punished by the Board of Discipline. This is an improvement over last year's resolution, which provided only for players who indulged in obscenity. As was to be expected, some of the club owners who outwardly say they are true sportamen, but who secretly encourage their players in acts of disorder and in the use of filthy language, began to squirm in their chairs. They said that perhaps it might be better to hear the report of the Rules Committee, and also that of the Comstitution first; because in those reports they understood there were several requirements that were also contained in the new Board of Discipline resolution. They argued that they were very anxious to establish clean baseball, but they believed there should not be "too much legislation." It is understood that Dreyfuss of Louisville, Kerr of Pittsburg, the New York Club by proxy and a few others, including Rogers of Philadelphia, had agreed to stand together on this point. The attitude of Rogers was explained as being in the nature of a "hold-up," so that he might because in cluding Rogers of Philadelphia, had agreed to stand tog when the League finally adjourned it was each year.

When the League finally adjourned it was with the agreement to meet again this morning at 11 o'clock. The delegates said that they did not expect ito conclude their deliberations until to-merrow or perhaps Saturday. It was said that the Philadelphia men had been working quietly and had secured private agreements with a majority of the other clubs to continue the old rate of admission in Quakertown, in which event they could be in a position to treat with the few opposing clubs left on a 50-cent basis. I Manager Hanlon of the Brooklyns had another char with Mike Griffin about the captaincy of the team, but no agreement was reached. McGraw said that there was no trouble about his being signed to manage the Baltimores. He outlined the make-up of that team as follows.

A. G. Spalding surprised the baseball men by walking into the star chamber late in the afternoon. He has not attended a League meeting in several years, and his presence was regarded as sighileant. He told The Sux man that he morely dropped in to see some of his friends. Spalding had a chat about old-time baseball with W. B. Wheeler and the veteran Arthur Cummings, the inventor of curved pitching.

Jack Bonner, accompanied by Johnny Gorman, who was one of his seconds on Tuesday night, and who was one of his seconds on Tuesday night, and Fred Miller, his manager, called at The Sus office yesterday afternoon to give an explanation of how oil of mustard came to be used by him in his fight with West. Bonner said that the oil was bought by himself and German on Tuesday. He says that he explained to the druggist that he wanted the essence of the oil of mustard. Instead, he says, he got the oil in its raw form, and was not aware of it until it was used on himself. Bonner asserts that he instructed Gorman to have the stuff really after the seventh round, and that during the intermission between the seventh and eighth rounds it was rubbed on his left shoulder and arm. He said that he almost fainted from the effect of the stuff, and that it do him more harm than good.

"It was all a mistake," said Bonner. "There was no reason why I should use those kind of tactics at that stage of the fight anyway, as I was strong and did not think that I had any the worst of the 'go.' I lost $640 of my own money by losing. The statement that the oil was on my gloves is false. My arm and body are badly burned from the effects of the oil, as it had been rubbed in by my seconds."

Begister J. B. Haggin's Fillies. A cablegram received in this city yesterday brought the surprising news to New York horsemen that the English Stud Book authorities have refused to register any of the eightysix American-bred yearling fillies sent abroad last season by J. B. Haggin. Some of the turf men here were at first disposed to believe this action would bar the youngsters from the English turf, but Horace Theobald and other ex-perts say the Americans may be entered and raced as half-breds notwithstanding their disqualification in the stud book. But neither of the water.

Theobald said yesterday that this disside of the water.

Mr. Theobaid said yesterday that this disqualification probably grew out of the difference between the English and the American definitions of the term thoroughbred. In this country any horse having five crosses of thoroughbred blood on all sides can be entered in the stud book, even though his sixth dam was a mongrel of unknown pedigree. Many of the best oid-time American racehorses barely came up to this standard, while it is well known that some of them fell short. In England a thoroughbred horse is one whose ancestors trace back in every direction to recorded animals of supposedly pure liarb and Arab blood, without a contaminating cross. Many of the Rancho del Paso illies traced back in the direct maternal line to imported mares recorded in the English Stud Book, but there was a Lexington cross, or some other American cross not quite up to the English standard, in their pedigrees, and this, the experts say, will keep them and all their descendants out of the English Stud Book.

THOROUGHBRED STALLIONS ARRIVE.

Two Half Brothers to the Sire of Ornament Imported by Haggin.

Atlantic transport liner Marquette brought in from England yesterday two notable thoroughbred stallions for J. B. Haggin's Elmendorf Stud farm in Kentucky, Both of the horses are out of the noted English broodmare Angelica, and the critics who inspected them at the American Horse Exchange pronounced them as two of the best bred stallions ever brought to this country. Arkie, a breedy-looking big, brown five-year-old of great length and range, is by Arklow, a full brother to the $150,000 stallion Ormonde. Shapfell, a four-year-old, is by Kendal, the brother in blood to Ormonde. He is a compactly made bay or brown horse of great power, with a pair of deep, sloping shoulders, which throw his saddle place away back near the blind parts. Both horses were bred by the Duke of Westminster, the breeder of Ormonde, Orme and Bend Or. Arkle started and won on the other side, but the four-year-old has not been raced. The latter horse was one of the best coits of his year on the English turf, and he is the sire of the crack two-year-old Flying Fox, one of the favorites in the betting on this year's Derby. Mr. Haggin had not seen the two stallions until they walked down the gangplank of the Marquette yesterday morning, Horace Theobald having purchased them in England for the California breeder and turfman. George Maule brought the horses across the ocean.

STALLIONS TO RACE.

the year, has been promptly the acted upon by Secretary Toman of the New York track, who announced yesterday that $5,000 is to be hung up for such a race at the Grand Circuit meeting here next September. The race will be at mile heats, best two in three, and entries will close on April 3, along with the other installment purses which were opened two weeks ago. This purse, added to the stake programme already announced, makes a total of $30,000 for eight of the twenty races to be trotted and pared at the Grand Circuit meeting. Unlike the other two $5,000 purses on the list, the new feature of the early will not be opened on the subscription plan, the proposed conditions requiring that all horses be named when the entry list closes with month.

Terms Hautr, March 1.—At the second day of the Fleming horse sale consignments of green trotters were disposed of, and while prices were fairly good not many of the buyers on hand were after green stock. Sixteen green ones by Jersey Wilkes brought from $45 to $250. Fifteen were sold for Newman & Higginson, Uniontown, Ky., to close a nartnership. The highest priced in this lot was Sylvester, a three-year-old, by the sire of Jupe, which was sold to Fleming & Son for $525. NEWS FROM THE LINKS.

GOLFING PLANS FOR THE COMING SEASON BEING MAPPED OUT.

Club - Preliminary Survey Indicates Grand Results-Richmond County's Tour-nament-Experiments with a New Ball. There is little likelihood that the Apawamia Golf Club will desert the present nine-hole course on the old Boston road for the new ourse to be laid out on the Charles Park estate until June at the earliest, while the pretentious elubhouse to be erected will not be ready until the autumn. The new property comprises 120 acres and is very near the Rye station of the New York and New Haven Railroad. It was stated yesterday that all but $2,000 of the $25,000 needed to purchase the property from the Park heirs had been raised. A preliminary survey of the land has been made by Willie Dunn, who planned the links at Ardsley, Westbrook and elsewhere, and he regards the opportunity a grand one to make for a really line championship links of thomost famous of the gentlemen farmers who within the last thirty years have made a toy of a piece of land, and the plot at Rye has been enriched by countless tons of fertilizers. It is now all pasture land and in fine turf and little needs to be done but to mark out the putting greens to be ready for golf. Not a single artificial bunker will have to be built. The first tee will be on a rocky ledge, close to the site of the clubhouse. The ground for 100 yards in front of the tee is very rough, but a drive of 125 to 200 yards will gain a good lie. A wide brook guards the putting green and back of it is a hill so steep that an overplayed ball will roil back well on the putting green. The players will tee to the right of this green for the secondhole. It will be a blind hole, a nice cleek shot over two or three hills, the green lying in a perfect punch bowl. A timid player, by taking a line to the left, may get around the hills and reach the green in two. Thereafter the play is over an undulating grass country that should bring out the best of golfing. The face of some of the hills will be cut out to form traps, but otherwise the natural hazards need hardly be improved. A swiftly running trout brook, in places eight or ten feet wide, crosses the line of play on seven of the eighteen holes. 6,000 or 6,200 yards. Park was one of the

At the meeting of the M. G. A. on Monday night James Park and A. E. Paterson told their friends that the Richmond County Country Club would invite them to a greatly improved course for the next open tournament. Last fall the club's first open tournament did not attract the attention it should have, as it was held on the same dates as the intercollegiate tournament at the Artisley Club. The club has obtained considerable new ground, which will permit the lengthening of the course by merely moving back some of the tees, so that it will have a playing length of 5.250 yards, 1989 yards in excess of the present eighteen-hole course. The old tees will be left for the use of the women members. The course has many points of attraction to visiting golfers, and, as at St. Andrew's, players from a distance, on the presentation of the proper credentials, may have the use of the course, except on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. friends that the Richmond County Country

A basketball game between the Yonkers team composed of girls and the crack girls' five from Dr. Sav-age's Institute drew one of the biggest crowds of the season to the Fourth Separate Company's armory in Yonkers last night, "Our Girls," as the Yonkers en-thus asts call the team, not only surprised the local crowd by their good playing, but also frightened the "Bavage" girls, who had no walk-over by any means. The first half was brimful of good work, and at the close, aithough the Yonkers team had failed to score themselv a, they had succeeded in shutting out their opponents, and the Yonkers rooters yelled fould and opponents, and the Yonkers rooters yelled loud and long when the half ended a tie, with no points to the credit of either tann.

Sharp fast playing and plenty of it abounded in the last period. The visitors finally began to score and soon rolled up four points. It looked like a shut-out for the Yonkers girls until Mise Creado scored two points in quick succe soon on tries from fouls. The game ended: Dr. Savage Girls, 4: Yonkers Girls, 2.

Following this game the Fourth Separate team played all around Dr. Savage's first team of men, the final score being 19 to 4 in favor of the soldiers.

PHILADELPHIA, March 1.-Edward Johnson of Atlantic City defeated R. A. Welch of this city in a 100 live bird shooting match for city in a 100 live bird shooting match for $500 at the Charter Oak Park, Gloucester, today. The result was a surprise to the majority of the 1,500 persons, as Welch was a big favorite. His followers wagered money at odds of 2 to 1, and the Johnson crowd won several thousand dollars. Hard luck pursued Welchthroughout. He drew the most difficult birds, and eight dropped dead out of bounds after being hit with both barrels, Johnson killed 94 and Welch grassed 80.

The hockey teams of Drisler School and Columbia Institute met in an Interscholastic League game at the St. Nicholas Bink last League game at the St. Nicholas Rink last night. The Drisler boys, who were a livelier to than those from Coliumbia, had the game well in hand from the start. Their opponents showed strenks of nggressiveness, but the Drisler youngsters had a superb defence, while the work of their woalkeeper was really fine. Time and time again he stopped what looked like safe drives, and the fact that Columbia was shuf out is greatly due to his excellent work. The game ended 0 to 0 in favor of Drisler.
